watching, send and receive private messages, and change the way information about you appears to other users. To view the UCP, click the 'User Control Panel' link that appears after logging in.

The UCP is separated into six tabs: Overview, Private Messages, Profile, Preferences, Friends and Foes, and Groups. Within each tab are several sub pages, accessed by clicking the desired link on the left side of the UCP interface. Some of these areas may not be available depending on the permissions set for you by the administrator.

Every page of the UCP displays your Friends List on the left side. To send a private message to a friend, click their user name.

Private Messaging is discussed more in depth in Section 5.5, "Communicate with Private Messages".

SECURITY

- While the front end is only for the public, there is very little risk of this being compromised. The login details to change information is extremely complicated.
- The system is Wordpress and has a simple login system, while remaining secure. Wordpress is the back end of 58.5% of known content management systems.
- For extra security the private members section is running on a different platform. This is called PHPBB3.0 which is used amongst a wide range of the internet's private communities. Meaning the security has been proven and is constantly tested with updates.

The screenshot shows the homepage of the Military Police Association Ireland (M.P.A.I.) website. At the top left is the M.P.A.I. logo. Below it is a navigation bar with 'Quick links' and 'FAQ'. A 'Board index' link is also visible. A message states 'This board has no forums.' Below this is an 'INFORMATION' section containing a 'Login' form with fields for 'Username:' and 'Password:'. Underneath the login form is a 'Who is online' section showing 'In total there is 1 user online :: 0 registered, 0 hidden and 1 guest (based on us Most users ever online was 2 on Tue Apr 18, 2017 2:52 pm)'. It also notes 'Registered users: No registered users' and provides a legend for 'Administrators' (red) and 'Global moderators' (green).
